Note You can also use an eraser to erase a selection, or a smudge tool to spread out and soften an image. The colors displayed on the ruler can be customized to match the colors in the image you're editing, although selecting a color from the Tool Options bar (Ctrl+U, or choose the color from the Brush Panel) is quicker and easier. The lines you draw using the ruler have a default width of 1 unit, but you can change this setting by pressing and holding Shift while you drag. *

Massive pulmonary embolism after spinal cord injury. Two cases of massive pulmonary embolism (PE) following spinal cord injury (SCI) are presented. The first was a previously healthy 22-year-old male who had an anterior SCI resulting from a road traffic collision. The second was a 34-year-old male whose injury resulted from a suicide attempt. Their pulmonary emboli, which were discovered during evaluation of chronic right-sided abdominal and leg pain, were massive in both cases.

Transesophageal echocardiography showed right-to-left shunting. Treatment in both cases included thrombolytic therapy, followed by anticoagulant therapy. Neuroleptic-induced weight gain is not related to metabolic abnormalities in schizophrenic patients. Patients with schizophrenia are often described to be at a metabolic risk. This study examined whether patients with schizophrenia who experience weight gain during neuroleptic treatment also show metabolic abnormalities. Results of this cross-sectional study showed that in a group of 20 patients with schizophrenia, increasing body mass index (BMI) from 19.5 to 30.8 kg/m² during a course of neuroleptic treatment was not associated with an increase in fasting glucose ($p = 0.21$), insulin ($p = 0.37$), and C-reactive protein (CRP) ($p = 0.91$). No gender differences were found for weight gain ($p = 0.81$), insulin ($p = 0.17$), and CRP ($p = 0.79$).

Neuroleptic-induced weight gain in a group of 20 patients with schizophrenia was not related to abnormal metabolic parameters. Molecular interactions in protein extractable waters of food matrices during accelerated storage and cooking. Mechanisms of changes in water structure and food compounds under the influence of temperature and heat treatment were examined. The effects of temperature and temperature/heat treatment on water structure of alginate and starch were compared by testing Raman spectra of extracted waters, by analyzing thermograms of films of these foods, and by measuring the structure of heated samples. The results indicated that the temperature had a greater influence on water structure than the presence of heat. The effect of temperature is also greater in complex foods. Lamellar water presents in alginate and starch increases as the temperature increases. The effect of temperature on secondary water appears as dipolar-to-octadipole water at room temperature in alginate, but as

Does distance to the emergency department influence transport times of children and adolescents presenting with abdominal pain? Children with abdominal pain (CAP) are often transported to the emergency department (ED), which may lead to long total time spent in the ED, higher resource utilization, and increasing ED crowding. This study sought to investigate whether distance to the closest ED in Ontario, Canada, influences the times spent in the ED, total ED time, and total length of stay (LOS) for children and adolescents with CAP. A retrospective study was performed using linked provincial health care databases. This study included children and adolescents aged 1-18 years, presenting with CAP between April 2008 and March 2009. Using individual linkage of data from 2 cohorts, we studied a cohort of adolescents, and a cohort of children, presenting with CAP. Distance from home address to the closest ED in Ontario was used to describe distance to the closest ED. Time was measured as the difference between the actual arrival time and arrival time after 9:00 AM. Total LOS was defined as the total time spent in the ED until leaving, and total ED time was defined as total time spent in the ED until leaving. Descriptive statistics are reported as number (percentage) for categorical variables, and mean (SD) for continuous variables. Multiple regression models were used to assess the association between the distance to closest ED and total ED time, total time spent in the ED, and total LOS. A total of 12,229 adolescents with CAP and 73,552 children with CAP were included. For adolescents, distance to the closest ED had a significant influence on total ED time ($P = .01$) and total LOS ($P = .04$). For children, distance to the closest ED had no influence on total ED time ($P = .36$) or total LOS ($P = .33$). Distance to the closest ED was found to have no significant influence on total ED time, total LOS, or total time spent in the ED among adolescents and children with CAP presenting to the ED in Ontario, Canada. LOS was significantly influenced by distance to the closest ED in pediatric patients, but not in adolescent patients with CAP.Q: Did the Beatles ever make a song that was NOT commercially released and to whom was that song composed? For instance, did they write a song for Ringo that was never released? Or was it just songs on other people's albums?
