A patient who had suffered from a significant psychosocial and psychiatric problem since childhood sought treatment for his problems with a psychiatrist who was an expert on dissociative disorders. The patient's presenting problems, which had been diagnosed as conversion hysteria or hysterical conversion, were not successfully treated by standard psychiatric methods. The patient was not considered to have a psychiatric disorder until he began to experience dissociative symptoms. A diagnosis of dissociative identity disorder was made. After appropriate psychotherapy, treatment with antianxiety drugs, and electroconvulsive therapy, the patient's symptoms resolved, and he was able to function normally in society. Dissociative identity disorder is reviewed from a clinical perspective and contrasted with other dissociative disorders and related psychosocial and psychiatric conditions. Dissociative identity disorder is discussed in terms of differential diagnosis, comorbidity, etiology, epidemiology, and treatment.--- author: - | Ganesh Venkataraman, Donghee Jang, Ron Weissman\ Princeton University\ [{venka,djang,ronweiss}@princeton.edu]{} bibliography: -'references.bib' title: | Dequantizing Neural Representations\ (Extended Version) --- Q: Angular: How to use index in ng-repeat? Create your own 3D scene in the industry-standard Voxel format, then convert it into a standard file format used by 3D modeling and printing software.Lipid peroxidation in the tissues of tissues of male and female rats after administration of D-galactosamine. Male and female Wistar albino rats were administered a lethal dose of D-galactosamine in order to investigate the role of sex hormone in the induction of tissue lipid peroxidation. D-galactosamine was injected intraperitoneally. The concentrations of thiobarbituric acid reactive substances (TBARS) in the tissues were determined by the method of Draper et al. (1982). TBARS concentrations in the liver, kidney, and pancreas of male rats after administration of D-galactosamine were found to be significantly higher than those in female rats (p Q: What's the difference between UNION and UNION ALL What is the difference between UNION and UNION ALL. I have written 2 UNION query and both returned same output. What is the difference between UNION and UNION ALL. select column1, column2, column3 from table1 UNION ALL select column1, column2, column3 from table2; select column1, column2, column3 from table1 UNION select column1, column2, column3 from table2; A: UNION and UNION ALL behave the same way unless you have a different ORDER BY clause. The difference is in the output. UNION ALL only gives you rows that are unique. In this case, it only gives you rows that are unique in both tables. UNION, on the other hand, gives you the set of unique rows, regardless of whether they are duplicates or not. Welcome Hello and welcome to 719th Games.
